The Historic Environment in Lincolnshire 2007 to 2008: negative interventions

by Mark Bennet

The notes below cover archaeological work carried out in Lincolnshire between 1 April 2007 and 31 March 2008, the results of which were either entirely, or substantially, negative. These notes are being made available on the SLHA website rather than being published in the society’s journal, Lincolnshire History and Archaeology, as they have been in previous years. This work has been carried out, largely as a result of development managed by the planning system. The majority of archaeological work carried out in the county is funded by developers and their input is duly acknowledged. Full reports of this work have been deposited with the appropriate Historic Environment Record or Sites and Monuments Record where they are available for consultation. Information on the rest of the archaeological work and on historic building recording carried out during this period has been published in Lincolnshire History and Archaeology, 43 (2008). Assistance in the preparation of these notes was provided by Mike Hemblade of North Lincolnshire Museum, Hugh Winfield of the Development Management Team of North-East Lincolnshire Council and the staff at the Lincolnshire Historic Environment Record of Lincolnshire County Council.
